

Bay wants county $$$

BY MARY G. SEILEY
Bay St. Louis city officials want some of that $575,000 the county saved when the beach renourishment program was cut short.
But county officials say they have plenty of things to spend it on besides helping the city pay for a similar renourishment effort.
Members of the county Sand Beach Advisory Committee talked Wednesday about using some of the money for drainage, erosion control, parking, restroom facilities, showers and bus stop accommodations for beach goers.

The committee agreed to seek Board of Supervisors' approval of a continuing advisory contract with Brown & Mitchell engineers, the firm that designed and managed the renourishment project for Hancock County.
The company in particular would monitor erosion and drainage problems, under the

Fireworks sales take council heat

BY MARY G. SEILEY
Fireworks sales from tents or portable buildings will be banned in Bay St. Louis city limits almost immediately, under plans aired by City Council members Tuesday.
Council passed a resolution noting its intent to pass such an ordinance -- action which officials said is sufficient to refuse permits for such sales. Several applications for fireworks sales from tents already have been submitted to the city.
Officials plan to take action on the ordinance in a meeting Tuesday at 7 p.m.
Council members have complained repeatedly about the proliferation of fireworks tents in the city during the July 4th, New Years and Christmas seasons. Tuesday, a Waveland merchant said out-of-state fireworks wholesalers undercut area businesses' fireworks prices, fold up their tents and leave town with all the profits.
Council president James Thrifflay said such operations not only are unfair to area merchants with permanent businesses, but also pose a significant hazard because the temporary structures are vulnerable to high winds.

He said he's been opposed to such sales for 17 years. Councilman James Rutherford suggested a moratorium, saying he didn't want to see the tents popping up yet another time.
"We're hurting our local businesses by letting these people come in," Rutherford said. He suggested there are several permanent buildings available for rent on Highway 90, if fireworks merchants want to set up temporary sales.
The proposed ordinance, apparently will be short and straightforward: outlawing sales of fireworks from anything but a permanent structure.
Council member Thomas Farve opposed the resolution adopted Tuesday, although he didn't state a reason.

Sav-A-Center

Lamar Wheat, Vice-President of Operations; James Allen, Director of Construction for A&P; Frank Vise, Director of Real Estate and Keith Mitchell, Director of Community Development for Waveland. The 40,000-square-foot store will offer a wide variety of foods including a hot and cold deli, bakery and florist. See story on page 8-A. (Staff photo by Charlee Marshall).

Flag Day

Bay to have big celebration

BY ELLIS CUEVAS
Flag Day will be more than just a mention in the City of Bay St. Louis in 1994.
Tuesday will mark the dedication of the Bay St. Louis Flags and Monument of the Bay Flag Memorial at 1 p.m. at the walking track in front of Hancock Medical Center.
Legionnaires, Elks, military, veterans, and patriotic citizens will descend upon on the city from across the state, Gene Schloegel, flag coordinator reports.

A proclamation from the City of Bay St. Louis proclaims and encourages participation by all.
Festivities are co-sponsored by the City of Bay St. Louis, American Legion Post No. 139 and the Bay-Waveland Elks Lodge No. 2776.

"The flags were donated by residents, organizations and businesses of Bay St. Louis to both welcome our visitors and show appreciation for the city and the Mississippi coast," said Schloegel.
Legionnaires and Elks will be joined by numerous civic organizations, businessmen and private citizens to begin a Flag Day celebration to become an annual event.

The first large scale observation of Flag Day took place on June 14, 1877 when the 100th Anniversary of the Continental Congress adopted an official American Flag.
It was not until 1949 that Congress created the official annual Flag Day set for June

P&Z expects packed house

BY MARY G. SEILEY
City Planning and Zoning Commission officials probably will see a packed house Wednesday night.
The commission's agenda includes action on a proposal for a bed and breakfast establishment on North Beach Boulevard, plans that are expected to draw opposition.
In addition, the commission may draw an audience to its 6 p.m. meeting with officials of Continental Consultants, a Jackson firm that's drafting a comprehensive zoning and development plan for Bay St. Louis.
Members of City Council are expected to be on hand for the session, the first public report from the consultants since they began work on the project several months ago.

City Council has hired the same consultants to perform a second phase of the study, work that will detail the city's goals and objectives for development over the next two decades.
After the session with consultants is over, the commission is scheduled to hear a request for a special exception allowing a bed and breakfast establishment in a residential zone at 1360 North Beach Boulevard.
Some opponents to that project have organized, and plan to be on hand for the commission's public hearing at 7:30 p.m.

Supervisors do not like escape clause

BY MARY G. SEILEY
Hancock County officials declined Monday to sign on the dotted line with Mobile Medic Ambulance Service.
The Board of Supervisors deferred action until June 21 on a proposed two-year contract with the ambulance company -- supervisors dislike an escape clause in the proposed contract.
The clause says, in effect, the ambulance company could give 60 days' notice and cease services if the company isn't making "a fair rate of return" doing business in Hancock County.
District 2 Supervisor Alton Kellar in particular balked at the clause, saying the county once lost all ambulance service under a similar arrangement. He said he wouldn't agree to such a provision in a multi-year contract.
Mobile Medic officials told the board that compromise wording could be drafted to satisfy the supervisors' concerns. They said the cancellation provision is intended to shield the company from unforeseen losses that could occur under a nationwide revamping of health care services.
As it stands, the cancellation clause could be evoked if the

Waveland discusses drainage woes

BY CHARLEE MARSHALL
A good deal of Tuesday's hour-long meeting of Waveland's Board of Mayor and Aldermen was devoted to discussing Duke Levy's report on Waveland Ave.
Levy had been requested to look into drainage problems in the area of Waveland Avenue and Highway 90, but a depression in the surface of the street, that may have been caused by poor drainage was the major concern of Alderman Stan Weidman.

"Can we address this and nip this in the bud," he asked Levy.
Weidman wants city crews to go in and clean out the ditches and see if the drainage problem can be corrected. A business in the area might be a possible contributor to the situation for it is believed to have an inadequate catch basin. The city's attorney Lucien Gex was asked to write them concerning the problem.

The Aldermen accepted the resignation of Teresa Jones, registrar of voters. She advised the board that voter rolls are being updated and purging of names would be completed soon.

Bids on supplying 2,500 to 3,000 tons of asphalt were opened and the bid awarded to Bond Paving. The price was for delivering, spreading, compacting and paving.
The Aldermen will identify priority paving needs in their wards and record them. Money allotted for repairs will be

Get the facts about custody

By Dr. Ann Jarratt
 4-H Youth Development Specialist
 Cooperative Extension Service

"What's the best thing to do when your parents are divorced and you stay with your mom during school, but when you get out of school, your dad wants you to live with him?"

It sounds like you feel pulled in two directions since the divorce. I know it's difficult to leave one parent to be with the other even though you love them both.

I can't answer your question very specifically because I don't know your age, and I don't know what the divorce decree said about your custody.

I suggest that you talk with your mom about the details of your custody, if you haven't already.

Find out what the legal requirements are. Don't assume your parents know how you feel. Share your feelings with each of them.

In the course of the discussion, if you feel that you're being asked to take sides, make it clear that you love them both and that you can't begin to understand the reasons their marriage broke up.

You love each parent in a special way. Your love for one doesn't take anything away from the other.

Above all, keep clear in your mind that you had nothing to do with the divorce; you cannot do anything to put the marriage back together again; and the divorce didn't make either of your parents love you any less.

"I have an explosive temper. Sometimes I worry that I'll lose control and say or do something terrible that will get me in a lot of trouble."

I try hard to stay cool, but sometimes, even when I think I'm handling a situation, all of a sudden I'm in a rage. I want to throw things or scream terrible words. How can I learn to be in control?"

you feel your anger is getting more explosive and if it is causing problems in your relationships or in your school or work life, you should consider talking with your school counselor or some other person in a helping profession. You may just need a little extra support as you strive to gain control.

In relationships, sometimes a person may have angry feelings toward something the other person says or does, but chooses not to say anything for fear it will drive the other person away.

Recognizing that you have a problem that needs work is a good first step. There is nothing wrong with the emotion of anger. It's what you do with it that makes it helpful or harmful.

There are some things to try on your own that can help. If in effect, you swallow the anger, and you create a layer of anger somewhere inside.

The next time the person irritates you, you may add another layer of anger. On some occasion in the future, those layers may come boiling out with scalding results.

To keep this build-up of anger from happening in the first place, confront the situation when it happens and deal with it at that time.

If you're the kind of person who likes peaceful relationships and doesn't like to rock the boat, keep in mind that a little rocking every now and then is better than being swamped by one big explosion.

If you have questions concerning your teenage years, write Dr. Ann Jarratt, 4-H youth development specialist, Box 9641, Mississippi State, MS 39762.

Plug pulled on Bay tour boat

BY MARY G. SEILEY
There may not be a tour boat afloat off the Washington Street pier after all.

The Hancock County board of Supervisors has rescinded the permission it recently gave to Ben Yglesias to operate cruises on the Belle Carol riverboat.

The action came Monday when the board learned that the American Legion, which owns the pier, objects to the operation as a commercial enterprise. The county leases the pier from the American Legion, and last month had granted a five-year permit for the operation.

Monday, however, the supervisors were read a letter from American Legion officials objecting to the operation. Officials said they hadn't gotten the letter in time to consider it before granting the permit last month.

In other business Monday, the board heard enraged citizens from two subdivisions complaining about unpaved, deteriorating roads in their communities.

One woman from Silver Creek subdivision said the only access to that residential area often is blocked by trailers being hauled into lots. If a big storm hits while the route is blocked, said Gladys Jacobs, "we're going to die like rats back there, because there's only one way in and out."

Her husband, Donald, said a road grader could open an alternative route in one day, by clearing some 1,800 feet of existing, unconstructed, roadway. Mrs. Jacobs said she's gotten nothing but "runaround" from the county in pursuing relief.

Board Attorney Gerald Gex said he would research ownership of the proposed route, and report back to the board.

Meanwhile, residents on the 5.5 miles of unpaved streets in Silver Creek, Jacobs said, "are tired of eating dust." One resident told the board it's impractical to hang laundry on the line, because of the dust problem.

Board President Mike Lader reminded the residents the county soon will launch an extensive road surfacing project, with revenue from gaming in the county. Silver Creek, however, apparently isn't slated for the first batch of such work.

Earlier in the meeting, Larry Carter of White Cypress subdivision demanded action on deteriorating streets in his subdivision. Carter noted that he'd aired the same complaints three months ago -- adding that nothing had happened to improve the "deplorable conditions" of the streets.

Carter said county road crews had been in the area, but he said they apparently had "bypassed" White Cypress.

Supervisor Howard Lizana was at a loss to explain why work hadn't begun in White Cypress, noting the board had instructed the road superintendent to repair White Cypress streets last March.

In other matters, the board was told of a June 30 public hearing on a proposed subdivision within Diamondhead, involving eight acres owned by Northgate Lumber Co. The firm wants to build 48 patio homes in the proposed "Cappalama Cove" development.

The 7 p.m. hearing will be at the Courthouse.

Bay St. Louis Mayor Eddie Favre will unveil the Living Memorial at the walking track's big large flag pole in memory of contributors of the program.

Volunteers from Bay High School and St. Stanislaus bands will play the National Anthem.

Historical flags will be presented by Elks Lodge members from across the State of Mississippi.

Colors will be presented by the United States Marine Corps Headquarters Battalion, New Orleans.

A three-gun salute will be given by members of American Legion Post No. 139.

A Motor Flag Review with charter members of the Bay

Flag Memorial will travel on Highway 90 to the west city limits, then east to the Bay of St. Louis bridge and return to the walking track to conclude the ceremonies.

State Elks president Flanders will give a presentation and brief history of the evolution of the American Flag. The flags were, the Flag of England, the Pine Tree Flag, the Snake Flag, the St. George and White Cross of St. Andrew Flag, the Continental Colors, the 15 Stripe Flag, and return to the 13 Stripe Flag.

The raising of America's current 50-star flag will be the highlight of the history of the flags.

In his address, Department Commander Langley will comment on the lawmakers in 43 of 50 states passing a flag protection memorializing resolution.

Thriffley will explain how the community has banded together to establish this Flag Memorial.

The stone to be placed at the foot of the large flag pole at the walking track is a four-foot by four-foot white marble stone engraved with the names of the chartered members who contributed to the memorial.

The U.S. along with Mississippi State Flags will fly 365 days a year on the Flag Memorial on Highway 90, Bay St. Louis. On special holidays a set of the 50 state flags will fly, Schloegel said.

In preparation for Flag Day and the dedication, the state flags will be added on June 10 and remain through July 5, Schloegel added.

The majority of the state flags were donated to the memorial by their respective state governors and DAV department commanders.

Schloegel stated, "We celebrate Flag Day everyday in Bay St. Louis with our highway display of flags and within our organizations and schools."

divided between the wards, reported Barbara Rappold.

The board approved expenses for assistant chief Sandra Henley to attend a conference on gang enforcement, for officer Reggie Smith to attend a workshop on using a pepper based aerosol spray to contain violent offenders and for Marilyn Smith to attend a billing seminar. The board ratified a poll vote taken earlier this month for Fire Chief David Garcia and Assistant Fire Chief Steve Garber to attend a chief's conference in Vicksburg.

Advertisements touting the city of Waveland, in the Elks program for their mid-winter conference and the Sea Coast Echo's edition of Hancock Today, were voted down because the present amount in the board's advertising budget could not be determined.

company does not earn a fair rate of return "on the value of property used and useful in providing such ambulance for a period of six months," and if the county and Mobile Medic decide against a hike in public funding for the service and/or a reduction in service.

There is no definition of a "fair rate of return" for the service. Mobile Medic's existing contract expires July 15. The company proposes to cut the subsidy it receives from the county from $2.07 per capita this year to $1.55 beginning July 16, 1994; and $1.16 as of May 16, 1995.

The firm would retain the exclusive right to own and operate ambulance services within the county, providing a maximum response time of 18 minutes on emergency calls originating in the unincorporated areas of the county.

One section of the proposed contract gives the firm an option to extend the contract for two years, if it has performed satisfactorily.

State Troopers welcomed by most Hancock motorists

The large number of citations written by state troopers over a two-day period last weekend indicates the serious need for another task force visit.

The majority of motorists indicated they were glad to see the troopers cite operators with improper tags, licenses and especially the DUFs.

It is alarming that the number of fatalities on our highway have increased by 39% over 1993 for the same period.

When over 1,100 citations are issued in just an 11-hour period in Hancock County, that is a high percentage of the number of vehicles on our highways.

We have received numerous plaudits for the troopers, especially for the number of one-eyed vehicles with operators being cited.

This has been a serious problem in Hancock County for many years, especially on dangerous Highway 603.

We are sure not all of the vehicles with improper equipment were nabbed. The owners probably feel they were lucky that they did not get caught. Another quick sweep may get attention to the fact that our state troopers mean business.

"CUEVAS" QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

It is interesting to read the various reports on the catches of shrimp made since the opening of the season. By the reports, one gets the impression very few shrimp were caught.

In conversation with several local shrimpers, I have been told the catch this year has been good.

One wonders, just who do you believe?

I am sure of one thing, it won't take too long for all the shrimp to be caught by the number of shrimpers after them.

Today is a very big day for the members of Annunciation Parish in Kiln.

A 125th anniversary celebration will be held for the parish with Bishop Joseph Howze officiating at a 10:30 a.m. Mass.

Annunciation Parish has a very long and colorful history.

Kiln, at the turn of the century, was really humming with a very large sawmill and even had a 100-room hotel, drugstore and many other businesses.

Annunciation Church, I am sure, was a focal point of the community then, as it is today.

Many of the residents of the Bay-Waveland area have parents or grandparents, or even are themselves, from the Kiln area.

Annunciation Parish covered a large area of Hancock County and at one time had four missions.

Parishioners are being encouraged to dress in period costume, long dresses with bonnets or hats for ladies and the men are considering period dress, together with beard and moustaches.

The parish's annual picnic will follow Mass in the parish hall where parishioners will bring various dishes.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Casino job a dream come true for resident

To the Editor:

For the last couple of weeks there have been letters written about the casinos. Here is another one.

To some of us, casino work was a dream come true. It is fun and exciting. You meet new people everyday and when they return to the casino, they stop to say hi.

Some of you feel you were done an injustice. Maybe you are right and then again maybe not.

Have you ever talked to someone who has been in the industry for years? Have you really listened to them? They can tell you it is the same no matter what casino you are at.

Did they sit at home, collect unemployment and write letters? No. They just took their experience and moved on. That is how some of them came to the Coast.

So we have "imports" (as ya'll call them) Maybe they are not always right but who can say that we are perfect?

Can you out there say you have all the knowledge there is to handle some of the "imports" jobs? If you can truthfully answer yes, then you had better grow up. It is not that we are dumb, but we are just entering a new business.

Gaming is not something you can just walk in and do. It is something that takes years and years to learn even those at the top are still learning.

I am not a quitter. I am still learning not only what I do but what they do in the office also. Their jobs aren't as easy as they seem.

Not a one of us that started from the beginning can say we can be promoted to upper-level management positions.

If this was the case, I would love to be first in line. But I know I'm not ready yet, I have a lot to learn.

Southern hospitality is what I pride myself on. And I show it everyday.

As far as upper management. Their doors have been opened to everyone since day one. I know because if I have a problem and my fellow workers can't solve it, the open door can.

No I have not been laid off, but my son has. Yes it hurt me a lot to see him go. But right now I am proud of him.

He has gone to another casino in another state where the casino will open this month. He is taking the experience he got from here and putting it to good use. He is being promoted and making more money.

I'll miss him but I am very proud to say I have a 23 year old who is willing to learn. Who knows, after he gains enough knowledge, he may be back on the Coast for that upper-level position.

But he knows he has a lot to add on to his experience before he can do that.

Please take some advice. Nobody owes you anything. You have to earn it.

FROM THE SENATE

By Senator Trent Lott

We should pay what we owe

In 1992 there were about 972,000 bankruptcy cases filed in this country, nearly triple the number of eight years earlier. Because the bankruptcy system is under enormous pressure, the Senate recently took up legislation aimed at speeding the process of bankruptcy negotiation and helping to clear court dockets.

The U.S. Constitution gives Congress express authority to establish uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the nation. Most activity within the Bankruptcy Code occurs in Chapter 7 (liquidation), Chapter 11 (reorganization) or Chapter 13 (adjustment of debts of an individual with regular income).

Chapter 7 proceedings are what most people probably have in mind when they hear the word "bankruptcy." In a Chapter 7 proceeding, the debtor's nonexempt property is converted into cash and distributed to the creditors. Generally the creditor receives only a small portion of the money to which he otherwise would be entitled.

Unlike Chapter 7, in Chapter 11 or Chapter 13 proceeding creditors usually look to future earnings of the debtor, not the property of the debtor at the time of the initiation of the proceedings, to satisfy their claims.

The typical Chapter 11 case involves a business debtor that is attempting to continue its business operations by restructuring its financial obligations and also involves disputes among creditors as to the order and the amount of payments and disputes between creditors generally.

I hear a lot of complaints from Mississippians involved on both sides of bankruptcies, and most agree the problem is that cases just drag on too long in the courts. Those involved tell me that some resolution sooner would help all concerned.

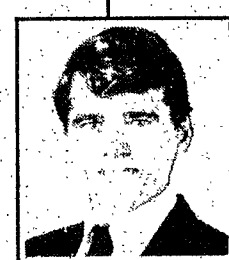

I fear that with our current bankruptcy code, we sometimes are encouraging people and corporations to take the bankruptcy route when it is not even necessary.

The Senate bill would encourage individuals to file under Chapter 13 which allows debtors to work out a payment plan with creditors, rather than going the Chapter 7 route which forces debtors to liquidate their property and settle their outstanding loans, just based on what's available. Liquidation is not a good solution in many instances for either of the involved parties.

For Chapter 11 debtors, companies that are bankrupt and trying to reorganize so they can pay off their creditors, the Senate legislation would set limits on the amount of time they could defer reorganization, and still receive this Chapter 11 protection.

A lot of small business men and women I hear from are very concerned about the number of bankruptcies being filed and the fact that they cannot recover the money they are owed.

Bankruptcy reform is long overdue. One of my basic tenets is, "if you borrow it, if you owe money, you should pay it." Under our constitutional authority, the Senate should find a way to make that happen — to not drag out debt or give chronic debtors a way to duck their legitimate obligations.

House passes bill to simplify tax code

Now that most Americans have gotten past the dreaded IRS's April 15th filing deadline, the House is looking for ways to improve and simplify the often exhaustive tax filing process.

A tax bill recently passed by the House would streamline tax laws by changing some of the rules relating to large partnerships, foreign corporations, taxable estates and 401 (k)s.

Among the changes being considered, the most interesting is an initiative that would allow taxpayers to pay their taxes with credit cards. The IRS and credit card companies have yet to work out the details.

In short, the bill would make it much easier on everyone from the individual taxpayer to the tax administrator. And in the process it would not increase the deficit or undo any major tax policy. It would simply close long overdue tax loopholes, and lighten the burden on many taxpayers.

While the Joint Committee on Taxation has said the non-controversial bill would not generate any "real" additional tax revenue, it would considerably enhance and simplify the tax code.

For example, the American taxpayer would win when the tax-exempt corporation they work for is allowed to set up a 401 (k) retirement account for them. In 401 (k) accounts, employees set aside part of their salaries in tax accounts to be withdrawn after they turn 59 1/2 years old, when they could be in a lower tax bracket.

Furthermore, the bill would simplify the administration of pension plans. The measure would prevent employers from contributing more to the pen-

THE PEOPLE'S BUSINESS

A Weekly Editorial
From Mississippi Economic Council

Sound policies bring economic growth

April 12-13 the Mississippi Economic Council will hold its 45th annual membership meeting. The meeting gives MEC members the opportunity to discuss plans for the coming year and to reflect on accomplishments of the previous year.

This year's theme will be a "Mississippi Celebration," in honor of the outstanding economic progress the state has made during the past year.

There is, after all, much to celebrate. Mississippi has been recognized by major national publications as the nation's leader in economic recovery. The state has also achieved high national rankings in both business and personal income growth.

Some 90,000 new jobs have been created in the state over the past two years, giving Mississippi one of the lowest levels of unemployment in the nation.

MEC believes that sound fiscal policy and the creation of a favorable business climate will, in the end, prove to be the supporting factors behind this success. These are economic stimuli for which there are no substitutes.

The state business climate is improved through legislation which affects business and personal taxation, Workers' Compensation, torts, environmental protection and government spending.

At the MEC annual meeting and throughout the year, Mississippi's business leaders will develop sound policies in these areas in order to sustain Mississippi's economic growth.

For information, contact the MEC office, telephone 969-0022.

County to get out of garbage business

BY MARY G. SEILEY
Hancock County officials are ready to get out of the garbage business.

Meeting in a workshop session Thursday, the Board of Supervisors agreed to turn over all their refuse responsibilities to the newly created county-wide Solid Waste Management District, effective with the new fiscal year Oct. 1.

The board had reached a similar conclusion in April, but took no action on it. Thursday, they informally agreed to proceed to divest the county of its landfills, as well as involvement in collecting and disposal of garbage. Also, the district would assume responsibilities for implementing a countywide recycling program.

The workshop decisions will have to be implemented by action in a formal Board of Supervisors meeting.

Earlier this year, the county and the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland pooled garbage collection and disposal through unified contracts with Boudins Waste and Recycling, and Waste Management of Mississippi. The move is expected to save each of the governments thousands of dollars.

But the district operates under a complex arrangement of cost-sharing -- leaving some supervisors confused about the fairness of each government's responsibilities financially.

For instance, each government sets the amount it charges the citizens within its jurisdiction to use the service. The district then splits, on a population basis, the amount each government pays to collect and dispose of refuse.

Administrative costs for operating the district, including legal and engineering fees, also are divided among the governments. To complicate matters further, the county contracts with the city of Bay St. Louis to bill and collect from citizens using the service. The money is turned over to the county, which, in turn, pays the district.

Meanwhile, the county collects millage for landfill operations, and shares that money proportionately with the two cities.

Untangling the financial data, has been perplexing. Supervisors, for instance, have challenged the fairness of the county paying some 59 percent of the costs to dispose of the district's waste, when the tonnage generated by residents of the unincorporated area is less than that of the two cities combined.

And while the district has successfully launched the collection and disposal contracts, William Johnson of Compton's Engineering reminded supervisors that there are major hills yet to climb -- the county is mandated to begin a "waste minimalization" (or recycling) program soon, and to meet federal environmental regulations as it closes the Pearllington landfill.

The county still operates the Standard landfill for disposal of refuse, such as tree limbs and appliances, but that landfill has to go through a re-permitting process that Johnson described as complex.

He asked supervisors to entertain the idea of putting his firm, or some other experts in the field, on retainer to oversee those efforts.

"Administrative costs are eating up everything we're supposed to be saving," said Supervisor Howard Lizana, who contends the district doesn't need much oversight now that it's off and running. Lizana said while the county expected the district arrangement to simplify things and save money, "to me, it's gotten more complicated."

Other supervisors agreed the arrangement is complicated, but balked at the notion the county should tackle its Standard Landfill re-permitting process and closing out Pearllington Landfill.

"You think we can do all this?" Supervisor Wilmer Seymour said to Lizana. "I don't know anything about engineering."

Board President Michael Ladner had a similar reaction, telling Lizana the supervisors and county staff aren't prepared to deal with the complexities that lie ahead in the landfill arena.

Supervisors also discussed the upcoming recycling effort which, Johnson said, will help reduce how many tons of county garbage has to head for the landfill -- and lower the costs for disposal.

Supervisors agreed the recycling effort should be launched with collection centers rather than door-to-door pickup services.

They also agreed to seek a meeting with Coast Electric management officials, concerning a listing of residents serviced by the utility. Coast Electric hasn't allowed Bay St. Louis officials access to the customer list -- information the city says it desperately needs to bill all the garbage customers in the unincorporated area.

arrangement discussed Wednesday.

Officials of Gulf Regional Planning Commission agreed to help design alternative parking schemes along the waterfront, and to help county workers get started with immediate erosion control measures such as fencing along the beach.

The county project ran 4.4 miles along Beach Boulevard, southward from Washington Street. Environmental regulators lopped 1.3 miles of the project off, to protect vegetation growing along part of the shore.

Cutting the project short saved the county some $575,000 in expected contract costs.

Meanwhile, Bay St. Louis city officials tried to tag on to the county's project to renourish another 5,000 feet north of Washington Street. The county's contractor left town before the city could get its project in motion, but Bay St. Louis plans to call for new bids soon to get the work done.

Les Fillingame, who's headed the city's project, told the Board of Supervisors in a workshop session Thursday the city may not have enough money to do the extra work without some of what was "left on the table" after the county's project was aborted.

The city has set aside $500,000 for the project, and officials think they've located a sandbar sufficient to tap for renourishment.

Fillingame's overture for county help with the city's project was met with cold water. "We've already spent it," Supervisor Howard Lizana said of the renourishment leftovers.

He particularly pointed to the county's need to deal with collapsing segments of the seawall -- there are some areas where Beach Boulevard may be jeopardized by underground erosion.

Other supervisors said providing parking and restrooms for the increased number of beach-goers will be costly. Officials are considering constructing parking bays similar to Harrison County's, with bus stops and restrooms. One alternative under consideration is constructing a third lane on the land side of the roadway, leaving the waterside lane available for parking.

Fillingame, however, said priority should be given to protecting the seawall north of Washington Street, before providing amenities. The section not included in the county project, he said, is in as bad a shape as the seawall area the county has protected with its renourishment project.

City officials say they don't understand why that section wasn't included in the county's project to begin with.

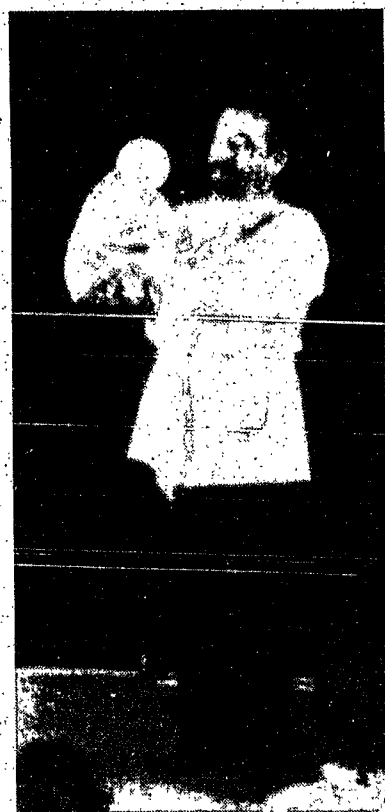

Fillingame said in some sections the city plans to renourish, the project will be protecting 20-foot bluffs between Beach Boulevard and the water.

He noted that property owners between Bay View Court and the highway have withdrawn an offer to pay for renourishment adjacent to their lots. That's because the Corps of Engineers takes the position that the renourished area will be public beach, no matter who pays to pump it in.

Fillingame said the extent of damage to the seawall and shoreline downtown may not be as visible as deteriorated areas that the county has now protected with its sand berm. "But the damage is there," he told supervisors.

When Supervisor Robert Peterson suggested the city help pay off a $2 million bond issue that helped finance the county project, Fillingame reminded him that city taxpayers are helping foot that bill. Supervisors reminded him the county is going to pay part of the Corps of Engineers' bill for repairs to the seawall in some of the city area at issue.

Fillingame said he wasn't seeking a firm commitment from the county to contribute to the city renourishment program, but hoped to alert them the city may need county help if the bids are more than what the city has set aside.

sion plans of high-salaried employees than to lower-paid employees.

Retirees would also be allowed to spread out their pensions over a five year period, thereby maybe reducing the rate at which they are taxed.

I am a firm believer in simplifying our nation's tax code. From January to April of every year, many Americans become ulcerated over just the thought of having to file their Federal Income Tax forms with the IRS.

I hope that these revisions are an indication that Congress can work to clean up an often mind-boggling U.S. tax code, thereby simplifying the tax process for both taxpayers and the IRS.

The Waveland store will be conveniently located in the western part of town, on the northwest corner of Hwy. 603 and Hwy. 90 and adjacent to the existing Wal-Mart.

The property to be developed is approximately ten acres. The $6,500,000 project is expected to bring approximately 200 full- and part-time positions to area residents.

In addition to job opportunities, local residents will note that upon completion, this Sav-A-Center will feature the utmost in selection, quality and customer service that has been part of the A&P tradition for many years.

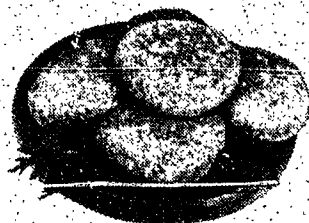

The 40,000-square-foot store will offer a wide variety of goods, including a hot and cold deli, offering a wide selection of prepared foods, a bakery, a floral department, a full salad bar, a seafood department, as well as extended varieties of meat and produce.

Fire department responds to call

BY CHARLEE MARSHALL

Six Bay St. Louis firefighters, and a volunteer with East Hancock VFD, responded to a structural fire in the 500 block of State Street, around 6 p.m. Friday, June 3, said Bay St. Louis Fire Chief Andrew Lizana.

The chief said the fire started in the main fuse panel. There was minimal damage, he said. When fires erupt from electrical sources, the first method of fighting the blaze is to cut off the power source, the chief explained. Flames are often knocked out with dry powder, he said.

"Whatever it ignites, you have to extinguish," Chief Lizana said.

NAVOCEANO receives Navy's highest EEO award

The Naval Oceanographic Office at the Stennis Space Center has received the Navy's highest recognition for equal employment opportunity (EEO)—the Nathaniel Stinson EEO Award for Program Achievement. CAPT Thomas Callahan, commanding officer of NAVOCEANO, accepted the award from the Hon. John H. Dalton, secretary of the navy, during a ceremony held at the Pentagon in May.

The citation recognized NAVOCEANO's achievement of EEO goals despite the military's downsizing and other changing circumstances. Specifically noted were NAVOCEANO's Upward Mobility and Student Programs, efforts to recruit women and minorities and consistent promotions of these groups to division and branch head positions. Also cited were NAVOCEANO's community outreach activities, including the Personal Excellence Program.

The chief of naval operations established the Nathaniel Stinson EEO award in 1989 and originally limited eligibility to commands and activities under CNO. In 1993, eligibility was extended to all Navy commands and activities employing U.S. citizens (appropriated and nonappropriated fund personnel).

The award is named after Nathaniel Stinson, who served 20 years as a Navy civilian engineer and became the first principal EEO officer for the former Naval Material Command.

The Naval Oceanographic Office is the largest subordinate component of the Naval Meteorology and Oceanography Command, which is headquartered at the Stennis Space Center in Hancock County.

The Command, headed by Rear Admiral John E. Chubb, is comprised of over 3,000 officer, enlisted and civilian personnel located at some 60 activities worldwide. Its mission is to provide meteorological, oceanographic and mapping, charting and geodetic services to operating forces of the Department of Defense.

Naval meteorology and oceanography activities at SSC are among the top 10 employers in the local area.

Robert Maness with his catch by casino

FISHIN' Y'ALL

By Jim Maness

It's time to go fishin' y'all. From the number of reports I have been getting in about fish being caught around and under the casino barges, I have to conclude that the casinos and their supporting structures are one of the better things that has happened to fishing recently.

My first report was from Biloxi. One fisherman reported he has had fairly good luck catching tripletails (blackfish) in the shadows of the casinos located in the Biloxi area.

I have received consistent reports, and wrote about them a few weeks back, about the trout that were being caught under the lights by Casino Magic in Bay St. Louis.

Now it seems that trout are being "murderized" in Bayou Caddy under the lights of the Jubilee Casino. Several fishermen have been fishing under the lights by the casino, using live shrimp, and have managed to catch 25 to 30 trout a night. That ain't bad!

There are a few things you should be aware of if you fish around the casinos. Under no circumstances should you throw your anchor through the windows of the casino. The metal anchor messes up the electronics of the slot machines.

Anchors through windows tend to make the security people very nervous and sometimes they just don't understand.

Seriously now, do not moor or tie your boat in any way to the casino barge. It would be better if you stopped your boat casting distance from the casino. This has the added advantage of not spooking any fish you might want to catch.

The barges are moored in what is considered navigable waters. This means you should be aware of other marine craft and act accordingly.

What makes the floating casinos so attractive to the fish? For the answer to this question you have only to look to the oil rigs that dot the Gulf coastline.

The underwater structure of the oil rigs act as a ecological haven for all types of marine life. Stuff like barnacles, algae and microscopic marine animals attach themselves to the underwater structure of either the oil rigs, or now, the casinos.

When you have an environment for small marine animals, the bigger marine animals, like trout and redfish, figure this place is just like a cafeteria and "come on down" for lunch.

It's just the oldest story in nature. Big fish feed on small fish. Where you have small fish you are gonna get big fish.

The stories about trout, both at night and wade fishing in the morning around Bayou Caddy Casino, made me so jumpy that I had to get in the turtlemobile and beat feet down to Bayou Caddy Casino a couple of mornings this past week.

Sure enough, a bunch of folks were out in the water with bent fishin' poles. Since a few folks have been preaching that the casinos would ruin the fishing, I figured that the bent poles must mean they were hooked to the bottom.

Low and behold, the bent poles were bent because they had speckled trout and flounders on the end of the line.

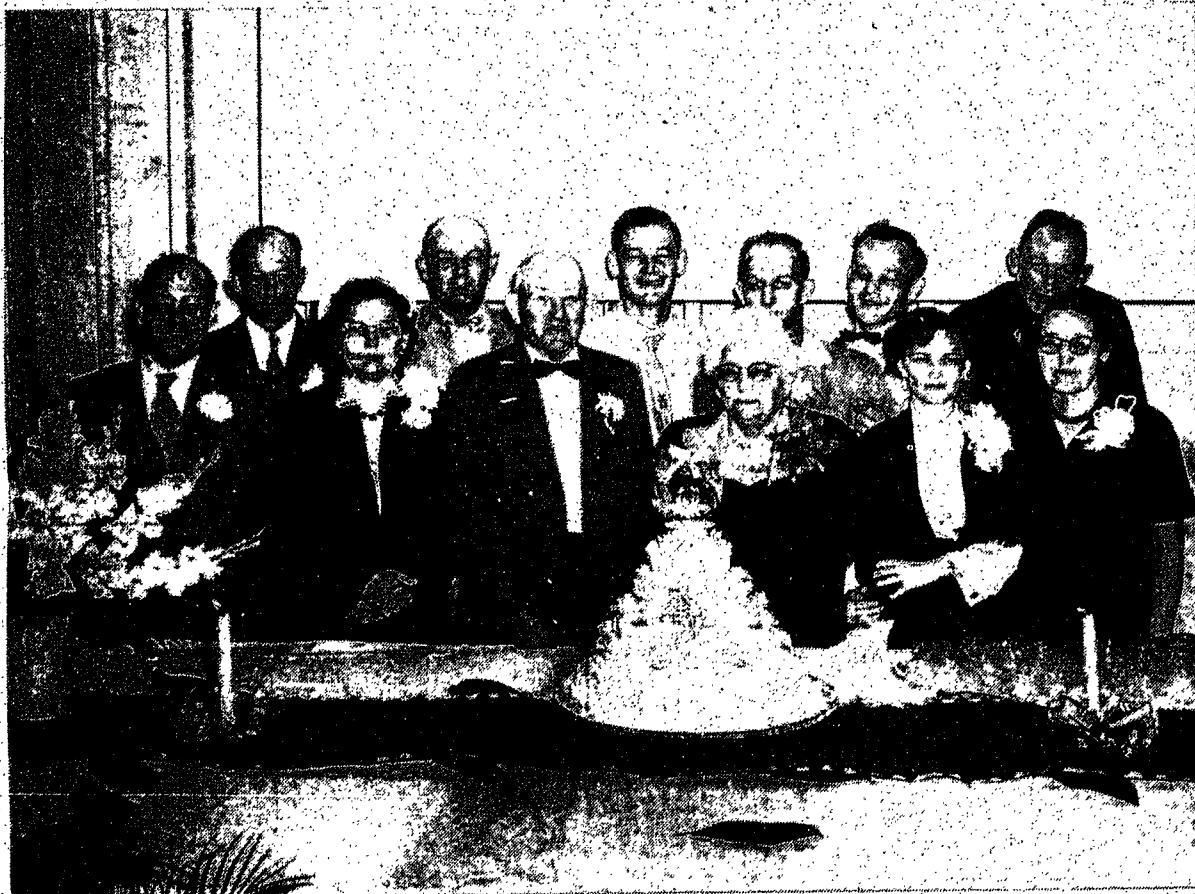

On one morning I counted eight fishermen out in the water next to the casino. One group was named Bebb (I hope I didn't misspell their name too badly) and they were from Bay St. Louis.

They included Mike Sr. and Mike Jr. Their family was watching them from the pavilion by the casino. They reported to me that they had

Sculpture art and Raggedy Ann highlight library's summer reading program

Sculpture art demonstrations by Bay St. Louis artist Tony Eccles and a safety program by Raggedy Ann and Andy will highlight this week's activities of the Hancock County Library System's 1994 Summer Reading Program.

Coast Electric's Raggedy Ann will visit the Kiln Library on Tuesday, June 14, at 1:30 p.m. to give the children some summer safety tips, such as water safety, electrical safety and playground safety.

The sculpture art demonstrations, presented by Bay artist Tony Eccles, will be held Wednesday, June 15, at 10:30 a.m. at the Coast Electric Power Association Auditorium, Main Street in Bay St. Louis, and Friday, June 17, at 10:30 a.m. at the Waveland Library.

Eccles, who began drawing and painting as a boy in Florida, has been in Bay St. Louis since 1987. In 1990, Times-Picayune critic Roger Green gave him critical acclaim for his show, Vitae Carrarum (Lives of the Cars). Since then, Eccles has been invited to participate in numerous shows, and his work is found in local and national collections. He is also on the roster of Arts Demonstrators for the Mississippi Arts Commission, teaching object-found sculpture making, and is well-known as a speaker on creativity.

Summer reading program participants must visit the branch of their choice at least four (4) times, and check out at least six (6) books before June 29. A reading record will be provided each child, and they need only get each visit stamped on their reading record for validation purposes.

A certificate and goodie bag will be presented each participant who completes four (4) visits to the library and reads at least six (6) books. Merit stars will be presented for every five (5) books read beyond the basic goal of six (6) books. Awards will be presented the week of July 5.

In order to register, children must come to the branch of their choice, complete their reading record, set their goal and confirm that their parents have a current library card. A library card is required to check out any books, and cardholders must be 18-years-old and have the necessary identification.

Further information is available by calling Janice Parrott at the City-County Library, 467-5282; Sandra Ladner, Kiln Library, 255-1724; or Evelyn Necaise, Waveland Library, 467-9240.

Diamondhead Garden Club

The Diamondhead Garden Club closed its 93/94 season with a field trip and picnic. The club members packed their picnic lunches and went to White Cypress Farm. Before lunch they took a nature trail down to the creek and collected wild flowers for later identification and preservation. After lunch they toured the farm facilities and fields.

White Cypress Farm supplies all of the fresh vegetables that are served at Chappy's Restaurant. Several members enjoyed the fishing from a small dock in the farm pond. Nothing was a "keeper" though.

The Garden Club is pleased to announce that Brierley Ackler, member and past president, has passed all five required courses and examinations and is now an Accredited Flower Show Judge. She joins fellow member/judges D. Jean Keen and Alice Brameyer.

The Garden Club does not meet in June, July, or August but will resume meetings on the third Wednesday in September at 10:00 a.m. at Diamondhead Community Center.

BREWER'S WORLD

By Jimmie Brewer

I'm Baaaack!

My most humblest, sincerest, down on my knees, groveling apologies to all of my readers! You folks had to start your day last Sunday without "Brewer's World!"

All week I have heard comments like: "You ruined my whole weekend," "You are a lazy worthless pig for not writing your column," "Last Sunday I contemplated suicide...or murder!" O.K., O.K., I got the message. As long as you folks promise to keep smiling and having fun on Sunday's, I'll vow to keep this column chugging along.

By the way, you ask, how was your vacation? I thought you would never ask!

Once again, I managed to have more fun than a human being should be able to endure on a vacation. Oh no, we didn't take a glamorous cruise ship to someplace I can't pronounce, or visit the land of make believe in Orlando with a crowd equal to the population of China. There was no lodging in breathtaking five star hotels. (with the exception of a run-down Economy Inn that had ESPN and pizza delivery). And there were no rides in over-crowded tour busses winding through skyscrapers and pollution in major metropolitan cities. There wasn't even any rides in taxicabs with a driver named Abdul!

It was just me and Mary and a whole bunch of Mother Nature. The only tourist gig we did was a night in Charlie Pride's new theatre in Branson, Mo.

Other than that our time was spent on two of the finest and quietest lakes in the country. Kentucky Lake and Table Rock Lake. I spent a lot of time dangling my feet off the edge of the dock with a fishing pole in one hand and a good book in the other. Occasionally, I even put a worm on my line. I love to watch those little rascals squirm when they are impaled by a fish hook.

Nights were spent lounging in a lawn chair counting stars and nibbling on cheddar and saltines. And, don't worry if you have stock in Budweiser, your money is safe!

Mornings were spent admiring sunrises on the lake and watching squirrels chase each other up and down trees. I'll never know why breakfast in the woods by the lake tastes so While to me it was the perfect vacation, it was still nice to come home to paradise. I'm ready to chase that golf ball through the woods again and then tell lies about my game in the country club. I'm ready for the hot, humid days where I can sweat off 10 pounds a day just by going outside. And I'm definitely ready to dine on some of those gulf coast shrimp.

Praise for do-gooders this week goes out to my Uncle Frank and to my old boss and friend Dave Reeves who allowed me the use of their weekend retreats for my vacation.

O.K. all you "fun-loving" Southerners, it's time to repeat after me. I will focus all my attention on having fun today! Now just do it. Peace.

REFLECTIONS ON LIFE

By Father Jerome LeDoux, SVD

The meaning and ideals of Father's Day seem to get shakier by the day as the male image inclines ever more toward the cover of a recent "Time Magazine" which depicts a human male sporting an unflattering pig's head.

"Is this really how men are?" asks "Time."

Most women seem to say "Yes," if not in whole, at least in part. However, the most common epithet used for males by females is "dog," not "pig." Frankly, the difference one way or the other is not at all complimentary.

So-called mainstream, traditional-style fathers have done more than their share to support that epithet through their macho, chauvinist, sexist attitudes and conduct. Fixation with sex and/or power is invariably the main male flaw.

This flaw spills over into and poisons intimacy which is mostly pillow talk to males, but to females is the length and breadth of every word, each gesture, every look, each action which blankets all the moments of each day.

Nowadays, the ideals to Father's Day have more than the traditional negative image of chauvinism and sexism to overcome. Unwed fathers are springing up everywhere across the land, further deteriorating the wonder of fatherhood.

In many ways, the words of Malcolm X fit the unwed more than they fit fathers locked in traditional marriage: "Any man can make a baby, but not any man can be a father."

And that is surely the biggest complaint made against unwed fathers: they have made a baby, but they are not fathering it. In fact, especially where the fathers are far down in their teens, they are nowhere to be found.

"Happy Father's Day!" would have to be forced through a mouth filled with sawdust for a staggering number of fathers both of the traditional stamp and of the maverick variety. It simply cannot be said without a feeling of hypocrisy.

Over 30 percent of the babies born in America last year were born out of wedlock. Particularly in the black community, this translates into most of those children being reared by the mother alone, since unwed fathers usually disappear.

Communities around the country are grasping at straws in an effort to do something about the worsening situation. One imaginative program in East Side Cleveland seems to be taking root in the right direction.

Aiming to turn "the hearts of fathers toward their children," Charles Ballard founded the private National Institute for Responsible Fatherhood and Family Development.

"The young men who come into the program are just like I was," he observes, reflecting back 50 years on his own growing up poor and fatherless in rural Alabama: "angry, with minimal self-esteem and without positive role models."

Charles points out how important a first step it is for young men just to walk through his door. His institute encourages them to develop potential that is already there.

So far, more than 2000 young fathers, almost all high school dropouts, have been transformed by the institute. Using streetwise graduates as their counselors, over 70 percent have earned diplomas and 97 percent support their children. Healing the wounds of guilt and the hurt of rejection, Charles Ballard's institute challenges the rest of America.

Library holds Adult graduation

Graduation for the Hancock County Library System's Adult Education program was held recently in the Coast Electric Power Auditorium in Bay St. Louis. A total of 16 students, who completed the program and received their GED certificate,

More than 80 students participated in the program this year. Classes offered include math, writing, reading and science. Students' programs were tailored to their individual needs. The JOBS program-Job Opportunities and Basic Skills-is also part of the program, helping people prepare to enter the work force or just improve their employment skills.

Literacy Program Coordinator Donna Hutchings commented, "This is the first year we have held a graduation for the students, and it is so important to them that they be recognized for their hard work. We are so proud of each one of them. And we so appreciate our more than 60 volunteers tutors, who spent their time in groups or on a one-to-one basis to provide these students with the guidance they needed."

Enviro-Tech International good for you, good to the earth

Living on the coast definitely has its advantages but keeping a beautiful, shiny finish on your car is not one of them. Ultraviolet rays from the harsh summer sun can damage your car's finish and cause fading. Finally a product has been developed to clean and protect your car from the UV rays of the sun and also the acid from "lovebugs" and other highway bugs our vehicles are subjected to.
This product developed by Enviro-Tech International is a water-less car wash and protective glaze called Dri-Wash. You no longer have to drag out the hose and heavy water filled bucket to clean your car. Just a few spritzes of Dri-Wash and a few wipes with a soft cloth and your car is clean and protected. Dri-Wash is also great for glass, chrome, mirrors, plastic, leather and vinyl.

Christell Link, Independent distributor of Enviro-Tech products will come to your home or office to clean and detail your car using amazing Dri-Wash for only $40.00 exterior or $50.00 interior and exterior. Or, you may decide to do it yourself and save! Dri-Wash is available to purchase at a special introductory price of $15.00 for an 8 ounce bottle. Other sizes are available.

Internationally recognized, Enviro-Tech offers other products too such as a body and hair shampoo with conditioner all in one, a thigh cream with aminophylline, a facial exfoliating cleanser for acne or scarred, troubled skin as well as an excellent pet shampoo that cleans and conditions your pet and protects against unwanted pests such as fleas and ticks. All Enviro-Tech products are environmentally safe and come with a 30 day money back guarantee.

COOKING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire
Caire

Saffron, so beloved of Spanish cooks, is somewhat of an expensive spice; but, because you need such a little bit of it to achieve that rich aroma and taste and that golden-yellow hue, it's fun to use saffron in special dishes.

But, stay that heavy seasoning hand! A small pinch, a really small one, makes for a tasty dish; but a heavy hand with the saffron gives a rather medicinal taste. So, start out with the merest suggestion of saffron, and add more to your particular taste as necessary.

And, if for budgetary or other reasons you hesitate to use saffron, you can achieve at least the color by substituting yellow food coloring.

This is a delicious way to use up leftover chicken or turkey, or for that matter, ham or shrimp. Here's:

SAFFRON CHICKEN PILAF

2 cups diced cooked chicken (or other, see above)
2 cups raw rice
2 Tbsp. oil
1 large onion, chopped
3 Tbsp. butter

4 cups chicken broth or bouillon
Pinch of saffron
4 Tbsp. chopped fresh parsley

Small garlic clove, chopped or crushed as you prefer Pepper, salt optional

Saute the onion in the oil, add the raw rice, and stir over medium heat until the rice toasts to a light brown. Meanwhile, heat the broth or bouillon to boiling and pour it over the rice in the skillet. Add the pepper, a tiny pinch of saffron and the crushed garlic. Cover and cook over low heat for 15 minutes or so.

Add the diced chicken, stirring lightly; cover the skillet again and cook for 10 minutes more. Mix in the parsley and butter, fluffing the rice gently as you do so. Pile nicely on a shallow platter or tray, and surround, if you wish, with avocado slices or broiled tomato slices. (4 to 6 servings).

You may, at other times, wish to saute a cut-up fryer and add the pieces to the rice mixture, instead of using the diced chicken.

Saffron can be used for leftovers en. But, as you can see from the recipe, this dish makes a lesser amount of chicken go farther.

Fishin'

been going out in the surf here for the past week and just flat murderizing the trout.

The average take-home catch has been about 15 fish. They have been using both artificial baits and live shrimp. They reported their best success came with live shrimp. They reported they caught trout, flounders and one 25-inch red fish.

Needless to say I couldn't stand it anymore, so I went the next morning and picked up my 50 live shrimp before daylight. My son Robert and I parked our truck along the side of the road just before where the raised portion of the seawall was built.

We crossed over the seawall and walked on the steps to just before the small rock jetty before getting into the water. We walked straight out till we were about pants pocket deep and started to cast toward the wooden breakwater with live shrimp about three feet under a popping cork. Bam-O the trout were there just as promised.

When walking this area be careful, because some of the bottom is gushy and makes the walking difficult. It might not be a bad idea to wear a ski belt for safety.

Before I leave Casino fishin' you should know that the most fish were caught during a rising tide in this area.

Consistent reports are coming in of big yellow-mouth trout being caught off the Bay St. Louis car bridge between midnight and about 4 a.m.

This is a little late for old turtles to be up, so I have no first-hand knowledge of fish being caught during this time span, but the people reporting have been reliable in the past.

The world's largest fishing rodeo, The Mississippi Deep Sea Rodeo, will be July 1-4 this year. It will be at its usual place, Gulfport's small craft harbor.

The queen's ball and the beauty contest to pick this year's queen will be held at the Broadwater Beach Hotel June 18 at 8 p.m.

The princesses will spend most of the day in Hancock County on June 15. They are tentatively scheduled to get the VIP tour of NASA and Port Bienville. They are scheduled to frolic in the Wave Pool and have photo opportunities about noon in Buccaneer Park.

This week's wonderful wise words: You don't need green bait to catch fish by the casinos.

Do you think the folks who say you can't catch fish by the casinos really fish, Turtle?
